Solid, Liquid, and Gas

The states of your wellbeing matter more than anything…

SOLID, LIQUID, AND GAS

LIVE-ACTION COMEDY-DRAMA SERIES OVERVIEW

In a last-ditch effort to reinvent herself, a struggling educator must win the host role in the beloved children's tv series STARPOWER!, only to face the original host's legacy and a public resistant to inclusivity.

WHY NOW?

We're living in an era of scientific skepticism and distrust in education. For the Blue's Clues generation, host Steve shared puzzles we solved through kindness and listening.

Today, the same generation is grappling with an anti-truth reality and mental health crises. Solid, Liquid, and Gas is a direct response to this, by using children's programming devices to dismantle complexities of adulthood. It asks: How do we stay solid when the world is evaporating around us?

The story investigates the states of matter (solid, liquid, gas, and plasma) as a metaphor for personal transformation.

Pitch Deck (Production / Story)

Completed Episodes (Screenplays)

1. Pilot – Inner Child | Budget
2. Who Does Not Belong?

Partially Completed Episodes (Screenplays)

3. Team Player
4. ~~For Educational Purposes Only~~
5. Sidekick

Stardust + StarPower!

The Show-within-a-Show

Live-Action/Animated Children's TV Series + Reboot in the SLG Series

Created by River Matthews and Skye Park (fictional people)

Pitch Deck (Narrative)

Stardust (1999-2006 Original Series)

Stardust, a cosmic mudpuppy, leaves glitter to help her human friend Clay and the viewers explore new worlds and learn science.

Tentative Episodes (Screenplays)

1. Pilot – Solid, Liquid, and Gas

StarPower! (2026 Revival of Stardust)

Stardust and her shapeshifter axolotl sister StarPower help Aurora, Ray, and viewers rescue worlds in trouble and explore all universes.

Completed Episodes (Screenplays)

1. Pilot – Milky Way Sick Day

SOLID, LIQUID, AND GAS

CHARACTERS

MAIN CHARACTERS

TRINI "RAY" REYES is a struggling 29-year-old Filipina American educator and puppeteer with a passion for science communication. She often breaks the fourth wall to speak directly to the camera, sharing cynical thoughts about the world, her personal failures or asking viewers to make a choice. She likes taking up space but is incapable of pausing to listen. She can speak Tagalog.

KWAN "SUNSHINE" REYES is Ray's 24-year-old little brother, an astronomy graduate student at Michigan State University and member of a local neurodivergent theatre. He got his nickname in college. Unlike Ray's manic energy, he is grounded and uses scientific logic to calm down Ray. His dead-panned humor often interrupts her fourth wall breaks. He can speak Tagalog.

MS. AURORA STARLING is an educator with a huge following and the frontrunner to be the host of StarPower! Despite seeing Ray as a theatre camp and STEM club bestie, she is unknowingly seen by Ray as her longtime rival. She often breaks the fourth wall to speak directly to the camera, sharing positive thoughts about the world or her personal achievements.

BILLY CLAYTON DUBOIS is the original host of Stardust. He left the show in 2006 due to his clinical depression and a drunk driving accident. He initially rejects Ray when she comes to him for guidance but becomes her mentor after finding out River and Skye are reviving the series without him. He exhibits cartoonish energy and often speaks to an invisible audience but misses the camera's gaze.

RIVER MATTHEWS is the co-creator of Stardust and its revival StarPower! She voices both titular characters. She is very protective of the brand and takes every chance she can to rid StarPower! of any flaw that Stardust had. Though she never breaks the fourth wall, she is aware of it like Ray.

SCHUYLER "SKYE" PARK is a co-creator of Stardust and voice actor. They are open-minded and look out for Ray's wellbeing, unlike River. It may be due to Clay's 29th birthday drunk driving accident long ago. In the early 2000s, they were male representing but have since come out as non-binary. Though they never break the fourth wall, they are aware of it like Ray.

YASMINE "YLEM" (E-lehm) LEM is the primary animator, designer, and puppeteer of the Stardust franchise. Like her cartoons, she is very animated.

SOLID, LIQUID, AND GAS

RECURRING

JET APRIL is a director, known for the children's tv series, Cinnamonville. They serve as the primary series director for StarPower!

THANH THIEN is the primary composer for the original Stardust, who created the show's music, including the theme song with River and iconic tunes.

CRYSTAL is a story editor, developer, and educational psychologist for StarPower!

KENDRA is a child actor who voices the younger characters on StarPower!

TERESA is Stardust's biggest fan. As a child, she ran a fan club blog for the original show. Now as an adult, she is now a science communicator who runs social media channels dedicated to and critiquing StarPower!

COOPER OWENS is an anti-science protestor.

ALICE STARLING is a mission's operations manager at NASA and Aurora's mother, who helps to fact check Aurora's scripts.

BARRY STARLING is a former theatre actor and Aurora's father.

SOLID, LIQUID, AND GAS

LIST OF STARDUST + STARPOWER! CHARACTERS

STARDUST (voiced by River Matthews) is the titular character of the original interactive educational children's TV franchise. She is a cosmic green mudpuppy who communicates by saying “twinkle twinkle twinkle.”

STARPOWER (voiced by River Matthews) is the titular character of the revival. She is a shape-shifting pink axolotl and Stardust’s bigger sister who communicates by saying “bubble bubble bubble.” She was introduced in a 2003 episode of Stardust.

CLAY (played by Billy Clayton Dubois) is the host of the original show. In the revival, he returned to his home planet as a space mailman and appears as a recurring character.

AURORA (played by Aurora Starling) is the host of the revival series StarPower! and the second host of the franchise. She is Clay’s younger cousin and a musician.

RAY (played by Trini “Ray” Reyes) is Aurora’s courageous sidekick of the revival series. She often gets sent to scout inconvenient worlds. She becomes the third host of the franchise.

ROCKET (voiced by Skye Park) is a cheerful green-and-white ship who transports Stardust and her friends to distant worlds. In each episode, Rocket lands after the host sings “Rocket Zoop.”

SUPPORTING

TELESCOPE (voiced by Skye Park) is an insightful telescope.

GALAXY FAMILY are a spiritual family named after real galaxies

- MILKY WAY (little child)
- CARTWHEEL & WHIRLPOOL (teenage twins)
- BUTTERFLY (child)
- SOMBRERO (teenager)

MINOR

HALLEY (voiced by Skye Park) is a comet who delivers messages.

GRAVITY (voiced by River Matthews) is a stray dog who lets everyone down but can fetch anything. They bark “force.”

SOLID, LIQUID, AND GAS

WORLD & TONE

"It's Blue Clues! …for adults…" – Carissa Sky

Children's programming device: fourth wall breaks for viewers to respond to adult questions…

Fantastical world of science on Stardust + StarPower! set…

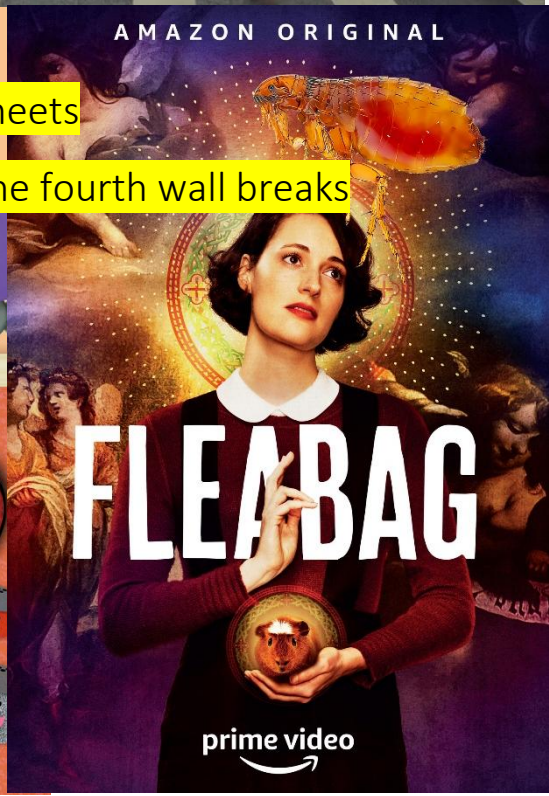
Miserable reality of adulthood for the rest…

The chaos

meets

the fun

meets



the fourth wall breaks

SOLID, LIQUID, AND GAS

SAMPLE SCENE

INT. PEANUT BARREL - DAY

The waiter waits on Ray and Aurora to answer, looking weirded out.

RAY

(to camera; cynically)
Should I commit a crime against humanity or be a model citizen? Crime or no crime?

AURORA

Don't mind us, host. We look to our viewers for answers.
(winks at camera)

RAY

You answered crime? Crime, it is!
(to the waiter)
A slice of pineapple pizza, please!
(to camera)
Now, do you see the loser in the room?
(pointing a finger around)
Lemme know when to stop, maybe Ms. Aurora.
(her finger land on herself)
Stop here?! That's how it is, you absolute jerks…

AURORA

Ray, have you lost the plot? You've got a deadline to finish the spec. I need to memorize lines now.

SOLID, LIQUID, AND GAS

SEASON ARCS (TENTATIVE)

SEASON 1 (SOLID)

Ep	Title	Plot Summary
1	Inner Child Writer: David Quang Pham	In 2025, struggling educator Trini “Ray” Reyes faces the end of her theatre career after accidentally incinerating her touring production’s puppet show. Blacklisted and facing eviction, she finds hope in a viral video from Clay, the host of the childhood science show Stardust that once helped her and her brother, Kwan, survive family trauma. Ray travels to Michigan to pitch herself to the show’s original creators, River Matthews and Skye Park, during an arts fair, but she is dismissed as unprofessional. After secretly recording a conversation where she learns a revival has been greenlit but that her polished rival, Ms. Aurora, most likely will host without any auditions, Kwan helps Ray track down a disillusioned, messy Clay in Brooklyn.
2	Who Does Not Belong? Writer: David Quang Pham	When Clay discovers that the show’s creators, River and Skye, plan to hire Aurora without holding auditions, Ray and Clay film a rogue audition video at Clay's apartment. They leak the video online, where it goes viral and sparks a global wave of fan auditions. To avoid a PR disaster, the network is forced to scrap their plans and announce a legitimate casting process, officially putting Ray back in the running for the revival. Ray performs well and gains massive grassroots following, but the network ultimately chooses her professional rival, Ms. Aurora, for the lead role to ensure a safe image.
3	Team Player	Despite Ms. Aurora getting the host position, the public demands Ray's involvement. Skye convinces River to hire Ray as a writer’s assistant as a consolation prize. Overnight, she writes a phenomenal pilot script for Aurora and StarPower, trying to prove she can be a team player. But River rejects Ray’s draft and goes with her own. They begin shooting the pilot for the test audience.

4	For Educational Purposes Only	The pilot for StarPower! is screened for a test audience. While Aurora is a hit with new kids, the older fans won't allow their kids to watch and demand the return of the original Stardust. They feel the new show is hollow. River brings back Stardust to appease fans, but Aurora struggles to connect with an animated mudpuppy. During a chaotic rehearsal, Ray steps in to read lines. With Clay's mentorship, her cynical energy provides the spirit that makes Stardust's whimsy work.
5	Sidekick	The network officially pushes Ray in front of the camera as Aurora's crazy sidekick. She struggles with the educational pause and is resentful of being second best again, but after seeing how her blunt communication style resonates with children like her brother Kwan, she accepts the role. The network screens the 10-minute pilot episode, Milky Way Sick Day to a test audience.
6	Listening Ears	The squad (Stardust, StarPower, Aurora, and Ray) becomes a cultural phenomenon. While Aurora handles science, Ray becomes the heart of the show. But Ray struggles to adapt to the show's rigid structure, feeling like a failure when she steamrolls audiences instead of pausing for them like Aurora. Ray refines her hosting style after realizing her direct approach resonates with neurodivergent children like her brother Kwan. She embraces this unique communication method, while the original creators and Clay express growing dissatisfaction with both hosts, creating an opportunity for her unique style to succeed.
7	Won't You Be My Enemy?	The show takes a political turn when Ms. Aurora uses a segment on atmospheric science to discuss climate change. While she gains a following among adults for her activism, the network grows cautious. Ray makes a choice to remain neutral on sensitive topics. This decision to avoid political trolls creates an ideological rift with Aurora, who questions Ray's silence on social issues.
8	Potty Mouth	While promoting StarPower! on a morning news program, Aurora is pressed by the interviewer about the show's political stances. Believing the cameras have cut to a commercial break, Aurora lets out a frustrated tirade about the anti-science idiots obstructing their work and accidentally curses. The curse word goes out live to millions of families, instantly shattering her image. While River goes into a tailspin of damage control to protect the brand, Ray finds herself in the bizarre position of having to defend her rival to a disappointed public. This moment of human fallibility from Aurora creates the initial opening for Ray to seek out a more unfiltered audience.

9	Time Out	Feeling marginalized by Aurora's dominance, Ray initially counter-protests anti-science events. She then accepts an invitation to a conservative streaming platform, choosing to bring her science ideals to a challenging audience as a challenge to Aurora's principles and the network's favoritism. Ray guest stars on a conservative streaming platform, attempting to prove she is brave enough to spread education to hostile audiences. The move backfires spectacularly; the public views her appearance as a betrayal of the show's inclusive values. During the next Stardust taping involving dry ice that explosively goes wrong, Aurora snaps, revealing the pressure she feels as a mixed-race woman who must be perfect, calling Ray a liability who burns bridges. The network fires Ray.
10	A Chain Reaction	In the wake of Ray’s firing, the network brings back the original host, Clay, as a recurring character. Clay tells the audience Ray simply went off to college. Ms. Aurora begins to suspect that Clay’s return is not just a favor to the network. She realizes he is planning to undermine her and use his influence. Meanwhile, Ray is picking up voice acting gigs to survive. She soon decides to volunteer at Kwan’s neurodivergent theatre.
11	Save the Children	At the theatre, Ray initially tries to direct the neurodivergent actors with her overbearing energy on Stardust. However, she is humbled by them. They don't care about her fame. She’s forced to stop talking and actually listen, learning that her role isn't to be the star but to provide support that allows others to shine. Meanwhile, Aurora escalates her advocacy by speaking out against a genocide in another country, despite the oppressor being a major backer of the network. She then goes on strike and leverages her following to demand Ray’s return. She delivers an ultimatum to the network, stating that while she provides the mind of the show, Ray provides the heart, and the program cannot function without both. The network bows to the pressure and rehires Ray. However, Ray decides only to return as a writer.

12	The Boiling Point	Following their shared ordeal, Ray and Aurora reconcile and become genuine friends. Ray celebrates turning 30 and crashes her car much like what happened to Clay on his 29th birthday. This time, Skye takes the blame and gets suspended from the show. Just before the first season finale begins filming, Aurora accepts the host position of Science. She quits the show. The co-creators, River and Skye, are about to pull the plug on the series. Ray returns to take the mantle.
13	Outer Child	Ray hosts her first solo episode for the season finale, by a crowd of anti-science protesters gathered outside the studio. She masters the pause technique she previously struggled with, speaking her truth directly to the camera and receiving a positive response from children. Unknown to her, Clay is plotting to reclaim the hosting spot, and remove her with the show creators, setting up Ray as the active target of the next season.

SOLID, LIQUID, AND GAS

SEASON 2 (LIQUID)

Ep	Title	Plot Summary
1	Back on Earth	Ray officially debuts as the lead host of StarPower! to high ratings. However, things become toxic when the original host, Clay, returns as a consultant. Clay begins a subtle campaign of gaslighting, whispering to the network that Ray lacks the spark necessary for the role. Meanwhile, the network begins development on the franchise's first feature film, sparking internal competition for the main character slot in the movie script.
2	Burnout	Production begins on the franchise's first feature film, Stardust Goes to Earth. Ray struggles under a grueling 14-hour filming schedule for this and the series' second season. Clay exploits her exhaustion, suggesting to the network that Ray may crack under pressure, mirroring the same burnout that led to his own departure decades earlier.
3	Hosts of War	After a tabloid leaks a video of Ray and Aurora fighting at a children's media convention, their networks force them on a kindness press tour, where they become enemies again. Aurora discovers Clay is sabotaging Ray but allows it to continue as she is against MCN's political stances.
4	Loud on Set	The production moves to real-world city locations. The harsh filming conditions, combined with random encounters from hostile anti-science activists and crazed fans, cause Ray's mental state to spiral.
5	Community Guidelines	Kwan's neurodivergent theatre visits the set for a Behind the Scenes special. When a minor technical glitch causes a small fire, reminiscent of the disaster that ended Ray's theatre career, Ray ignores the script and uses her puppets to calmly lead the group to safety, earning the crew's genuine respect.
6	We All Matter	After the fire, Ray is sidelined for a mental health break by the network. During her absence, Clay hosts a series of Stardust specials by revisiting past worlds. The episodes feel hollow, and viewership drops.

		She returns to her childhood home and finds her old Stardust VHS tapes. She discovers an unreleased episode where Clay accidentally broke a beloved puppet and had a breakdown on camera. She realizes Clay is a man who couldn't reset after a failure. Ray confronts Clay with the tape to show him she understands his pain. Clay finally drops his guard. He admits he was trying to sabotage her because he feared her success would make his own legacy obsolete.
7	Unscripted	As filming for the movie grows improvisational, Ray asks Aurora to return as herself. She accepts so long as she can use the film to advocate for the environment and wellbeing of children everywhere. They merge Aurora's musical talent with Ray's puppetry energy, creating a more balanced and inclusive production.
8	Opening Night	A special preview of the movie is held at a children's hospital. The event is chaotic; the children are rowdy, and an anti-science activist interrupts the talkback session. Clay reflects deeply on his own history with mental health.
9	Wish for Granted	In the Season 3 premiere, a terminally ill child actor named Grant guest stars. Clay officially retires, passing his signature cosmic vest to Grant. Despite Grant's wish for the show to continue, the network abruptly cancels the series, leaving only five produced episodes for the final season. Ray announces the news to the world on a book signing tour. Kwan also shares news to Ray that he is given an opportunity to audition for an acclaimed science documentary series.

SOLID, LIQUID, AND GAS

SEASON 3 (GAS)

Ep	Title	Plot Summary
1	Absolute Zero	Ray watches the final episode of Stardust from 2006 to prepare for her last sign-off. She films it with the crew, which goes disastrously. Ray finds out that the latest FCC and its anti-science views had something to do with the show's cancellation.
2	Solid	Ray does Kwan a solid and coaches him on his audition for an acclaimed science documentary series. Kwan fails his audition. Years fly by as their government puts more anti-science individuals in power.
3	Liquid	After a 2038 hurricane disaster, the crew reunites as spokespersons for donations after nearly a decade since they last were together.
4	Gas	The nation faces massive education funding cuts, threatening to shut down libraries and science centers. Ray joins a grassroots movement with Ms. Aurora as a spokesperson. Their protests becomes a flashpoint for anti-science sentiment. An extremist group, agitated by the activists' stance against global injustice and funding cuts, disrupts the peaceful march. In a horrific turn, an anti-activist driver rams through the crowd, critically injuring Ms. Aurora. Ray is left holding her fallen rival on the pavement, realizing the battle for science and truth is now a matter of life and death.
5	Plasma	Following the horrific attack on Ms. Aurora, the nation is in a state of shock. Despite this, the anti-science extremist groups attempt to control the narrative, claiming the accident was the activists' fault.
6	Prima Materia	With Aurora hospitalized and the community reeling, Ray donates blood to her and uses the Stardust platform to launch a message about the importance of education and inclusivity. Inspired by Ray's courage, thousands of now-adult Stardust fans march on the capital, demanding the restoration of funding for education. Meanwhile, Ray attends the premiere of Kwan's science series that he created himself.