SOLID, LIQUID, AND GAS

Marketing/Distribution/Social Media Plan

Social Media/Marketing Plan

The series targets millennials who grew up with early 2000s educational programming, and science enthusiasts engaged in educational content.

The digital strategy will treat the fictional show-within-a-show (StarPower!) as a real entity:

- Instagram, TikTok, YouTube: Dedicated channels will host StarPower! segments.
- Reddit: We will target subreddits like r/Science to foster a community around the fictional Stardust franchise.
- Influencer Partnerships: Collaborations with science communicators (like Hank Green or Simone Giertz).
- Interactive Digital Hub: Our website features clues from the show, downloadable comics, and newsletters.
- Merchandising: A run of Stardust style apparel and StarPower the axolotl plushies to generate revenue and brand visibility.
- We will partner with STEM organizations that David is a member of (like Astronomy on Tap) to host screenings that highlight our approach to science communication and mental health.

Distribution Plan

The pilot “Inner Child” will be submitted to festivals with episodic categories, including Sundance, SXSW. In NYC: Asian American International Film Fest and Winter Film Festival and Tribeca.

Our goal is a licensing deal with platforms for unconventional comedies and educational content, such as Netflix or Hulu. And PBS if they are open to it. We will also approach JoySauce, an Asian media platform, and Studio Dome for consideration.
